BRAINWARE UNIVERSITY

1. Introduction

Brainware University recognises the importance of responsible procurement in promoting sustainable food systems, supporting agricultural activities, strengthening local supply chains, and improving the availability of fresh food for institutional consumption. In alignment with the UN SDG 2 (SDG 2: Zero Hunger), the University acknowledges the role of institutional purchasing practices in supporting agricultural producers and encouraging the responsible utilisation of locally available food products.

As part of its institutional activities, Brainware University has undertaken initiatives to procure selected agricultural produce from its Agriculture Department for use in the University canteen. This practice establishes a connection between agricultural production within the University and its institutional food-service requirements.

The initiative demonstrates the utilisation of agricultural produce from an identifiable institutional source and provides an opportunity to strengthen local sourcing practices. Procurement from local sources, where feasible, can support shorter supply chains, improve access to fresh products, create opportunities for agricultural production, and encourage more responsible food procurement.

The report documents the available procurement records and examines their relevance to local and sustainable sourcing under the applicable assessment framework. It also identifies measures that can strengthen the University's procurement practices, sustainability monitoring, and supporting documentation.

2. Institutional Initiatives

During the reporting period of January-December 2025, Brainware University purchased vegetables, fruits, and other agricultural produce from its Agriculture Department for use in the University canteen. The procurement records demonstrate recurring purchases throughout the year, with the quantities and values recorded against individual items.

The products purchased included green bananas, leafy vegetables, cabbage, brinjal, elephant foot yam (locally known as echore), lemons, coconuts, eggs, and other seasonal vegetables. These transactions demonstrate the University's practice of sourcing selected food products directly from its Agriculture Department rather than relying exclusively on external suppliers. The purchases were communicated by the Canteen Department to the Finance Officer, and the corresponding communications contain approval from the Finance Officer. The transactions were recorded at the stated market rates, providing an administrative record of the purchases.

BRAINWARE UNIVERSITY

398, Ramkrishnapur Road, Barasat, North 24 Parganas, Kolkata - 700 125

This initiative supports the use of locally available agricultural produce for institutional consumption and provides an opportunity to strengthen linkages between agricultural production and campus food services.

3. Contribution to Local and Sustainable Food Procurement

The University's procurement initiative contributes to the following areas:

- a. Support for local agricultural production: Purchasing produce from the University's Agriculture Department strengthens the connection between agricultural activities and institutional food requirements.
- b. Access to fresh agricultural produce: The purchase of vegetables, fruits, and other food products supports the availability of agricultural produce for preparation of food in the University canteen.
- c. Integration of agriculture with campus food services: The initiative demonstrates a practical link between agricultural production and the University's food-service operations.
- d. Responsible institutional procurement: The documented transactions and Finance Officer approvals provide an administrative basis for monitoring purchases and expenditure.
- e. Identification of Local Sources: The University may identify suitable local farmers, agricultural cooperatives, food producers, and suppliers within the surrounding region. The University Agriculture Department can also be included as an identifiable source of agricultural products, where relevant.
- f. Procurement Preferences: Where feasible and consistent with institutional procurement procedures, preference may be given to locally available, seasonal, and sustainably produced products. Procurement decisions should continue to consider food safety, quality, affordability, supplier reliability, and continuity of supply.
- g. Sustainable Sourcing Considerations: The University may encourage suppliers to provide information about responsible cultivation methods, efficient resource use, product traceability, and environmentally appropriate packaging. Sustainability-related claims should be supported by suitable supplier declarations, certifications, or other verifiable documentation.
- h. Integration with Campus Food Services: The University may encourage campus canteen operators and other relevant food-service units to consider local sourcing when procuring vegetables, fruits, cereals, pulses, and other food ingredients. Purchase records should identify the origin of products wherever this information is available.

398, Ramkrishnapur Road, Barasat, North 24 Parganas, Kolkata - 700 125

- i. Relevance to SDG 2: The initiative is aligned with the broader objectives of improving food availability and supporting sustainable agricultural systems. However, the available records establish the source and value of purchases; they do not independently verify organic certification, sustainable cultivation methods, or reductions in food transportation emissions.

4. Monitoring and Evaluation

The SDG or Sustainability Coordination Mechanism, in coordination with the relevant administrative units and IQAC, may periodically review local and sustainable procurement practices. Monitoring may include:

- ✓ Number of local farmers, producers, or suppliers engaged.
- ✓ Total value of purchases from local sources.
- ✓ Percentage of relevant food procurement expenditure attributable to local sources.
- ✓ Quantity or percentage of products sourced from verified sustainable producers.
- ✓ Number of campus food-service vendors adopting local sourcing practices.
- ✓ Availability of purchase records, supplier declarations, and sustainability-related evidence.
- ✓ Changes in procurement expenditure and sourcing patterns across reporting years.
- ✓ These indicators would help the University assess progress and identify opportunities for improvement.

5. Memoranda of Understanding Supporting Sustainable Agriculture

Brainware University has also established formal collaborations with agricultural-sector organisations through Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs). These collaborations support the University's wider engagement with agriculture, sustainable farming, and responsible food systems. The MoUs provide a framework for cooperation, knowledge exchange, research, and capacity-building; they are complementary evidence of the University's sustainability-related engagement, rather than direct proof of procurement transactions.

The MoU with Matribhumi Agriculture India Pvt. Ltd., signed on 17 March 2025 (attached as annexure), covers collaboration in agriculture and horticulture, including agricultural infrastructure, micro-irrigation, hydroponics, bio-fertilisers, horticultural consultancy, skill development, research, and practical training. The agreement also refers to sustainable development and rural upliftment through the integration of institutional knowledge with field-based agricultural practices.

The MoU with Krishibandhu Crop Science Pvt. Ltd., signed on 5 March 2025 (attached as annexure), supports collaboration in climate-smart agriculture and improved crop productivity. The agreement identifies practices such as alternate wetting and drying (AWD) and direct-seeded rice (DSR), and provides for training, internships, research, and awareness activities concerning sustainable agricultural practices.

Together, these MoUs strengthen the University's institutional links with agricultural organisations and provide a basis for promoting sustainable agricultural knowledge and practices. For Indicator 2.5.4, they should be read alongside the University's documented purchases from its Agriculture Department. Since the MoUs primarily establish cooperation in education, research, training, and sustainable agriculture, they do not by themselves establish that products were purchased from either company or that all procured products were certified sustainable.

6. Conclusion

Brainware University has demonstrated an institutional practice of purchasing selected agricultural products from its Agriculture Department for use in the University canteen. The documented purchases during January–December 2025 amounted to ₹10,260, covering vegetables, fruits, eggs, and other agricultural produce. The records also demonstrate administrative review and approval of the reported transactions.

This initiative provides evidence of the University's engagement in local agricultural procurement and its efforts to integrate agricultural production with campus food services. It is relevant to the broader objectives of UN SDG 2, particularly sustainable food systems and food availability.

To strengthen future reporting under SDG 2.5.4, the University may formalise a local and sustainable procurement policy, establish measurable procurement targets, maintain supplier and product-origin records, and document sustainability-related purchasing criteria. These measures would help demonstrate not only the purchase of locally available products but also the extent to which sustainability is prioritised in institutional procurement.
